Researching Conviviality in Unequal Societies: Theories and Methods

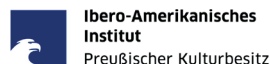

The Maria Sibylla Merian Centre Latin America understands conviviality as past and present ways of living together in contexts characterized by diversity and inequality. As one of its core research goals, the Centre strives to transcend both disciplinary boundaries and the European focus in current research on conviviality. Accordingly, this conference discusses – from an interdisciplinary and transregional perspective – theories, methods as well as empirical studies that examine coexistence in Latin America both historically and in present times. The two-day event addresses the challenges of researching conviviality in four different spheres: culture, politics, normativities, and everyday life. Presentations and discussions will be conducted in English and Spanish.

Venue:

Universidade de São Paulo
Auditorium of the Conselho Universitário
