OLAGN PRESENTS NATALIA GARAYALDE'S 2020 FILM, ESQUIRLAS (SPLINTERS)

"On November 3, 1995, the Río Tercero Military Munitions Factory, the emblematic industry of my hometown, exploded. Thousands of shells were fired against the city that had produced them. I was 12 years old, and while I was trying to escape from the blast, I recorded the devastation of my hometown with a video camera. Twenty years later I found those tapes. The threat of the industrial and military sector is still persistent at the present time." – Natalia Garayalde.

The film is in Spanish with English subtitles. There's going to be a Q&A with the director after the end of the film (in Spanish), moderated by José Parra Zeltzer, DPhil Student in Spanish and committee member of OLAGN.
